The Tradition

Aster. Nasturtium. Delphinium. We thought
 Fingers in dirt meant it was our dirt, learning
 Names in heat, in elements classical
 Philosophers said could change us. Star Gazer.
 Foxglove. Summer seemed to bloom against the will
 Of the sun, which news reports claimed flamed hotter
 On this planet than when our dead fathers
 Wiped sweat from their necks. Cosmos. Baby's Breath.
 Men like me and my brothers filmed what we
 Planted for proof we existed before
 Too late, sped the video to see blossoms
 Brought in seconds, colors you expect in poems
 Where the world ends, everything cut down.
 John Crawford. Eric Garner. Mike Brown.

The Tradition is a 2019 poetry collection by Jericho Brown. The collection won the 2020 Pulitzer Prize for Poetry. Judges of the prize called the book "a collection of masterful lyrics that combine delicacy with historical urgency in their loving evocation of bodies vulnerable to hostility and violence."

The Church Covenant

Strengthening Our Relationship with God and Mankind

LEADER: Having been led, as we believe by the Spirit of God, to receive the Lord Jesus Christ as our Savior and, on the profession of our faith, having been baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we do now in the presence of God, and this assembly host solemnly and joyfully enter into covenant with one another as one body in Christ.

RESPONSE: We engage, therefore, by the aid of the Holy Spirit to walk together in Christian love; to strive for the advancement of this Church in knowledge, holiness, and comfort; to promote its prosperity and spirituality; to sustain its worship, ordinances, discipline, and doctrines; to contribute cheerfully and regularly to the support of the ministry, the expenses of the Church, the relief of the poor, and the spread of the gospel through all nations.

LEADER: We also engage to maintain family and secret devotions, to bring up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; to seek the salvation of our kindred and acquaintances; to walk circumspectly in the world; to be just in our dealings, faithful in our engagements, and exemplary in our deportment; to avoid all tattling, backbiting, and excessive anger; to be zealous in our efforts to advance the kingdom of our Savior.

RESPONSE: We further engage to watch over one another in brotherly love; to remember one another in prayer; to aid one another in sickness and distress; to cultivate Christian sympathy in feeling and Christian courtesy in speech; to be slow to take offense, but always ready for reconciliation, and mindful of the rules of our Savior to secure it without delay.

TOGETHER: We moreover engage that when we remove from this place, we will, as soon as possible, unite with some other church where we can carry out the spirit of this covenant and the principles of God's Word.

Our Time

By Esau McCaulley

Excerpt from Guest Column printed in the New York Times
What Good Friday and Easter Mean for Black Americans

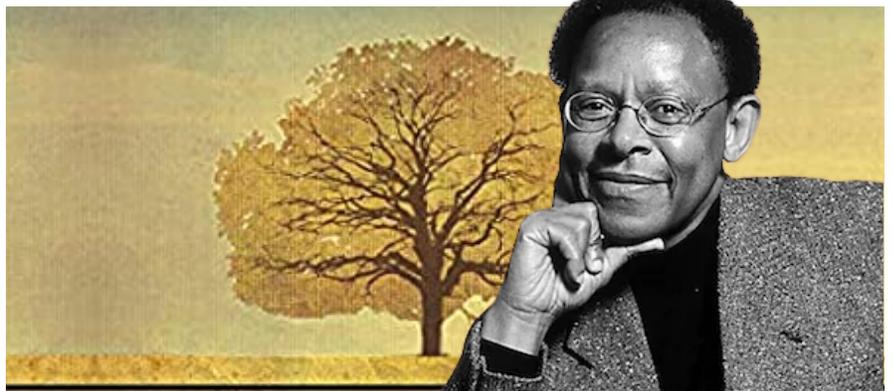

James Cone's important work of theology "The Cross and the Lynching Tree" connects the crucifixion of Jesus with the lynching of Black bodies: both are manifestations of evil inflicted as a means of control. Since the time of the hush harbors, we have found solace in the idea that the God they worshiped knew the trouble we'd seen. He experienced it himself. The hip-hop artist Swoope said, "Christ died in the Blackest way possible, with his hands up and his momma there watching him."

But the story of Jesus does not end with his death. In the Gospels, Jesus claimed that he had power over death. Christians believe his resurrection vindicated that claim. The body that God raised was the same body that was on the cross. After his resurrection, Jesus' disciples recognized him. They ate and talked with him. His body was transformed and healed, no longer subject to death, but it still had the wounds from his crucifixion. There was continuity and discontinuity with the person they knew.

"The conspicuous absence of the lynching tree in American theological discourse and preaching is profoundly revealing, especially since the crucifixion was clearly a first-century lynching."

— JAMES H. CONE, THE CROSS AND THE LYNCHING TREE

Jesus' resurrection has implications not just for his body, but for all bodies subject to death. Christians believe that what God did for Jesus, he will do for us. The resurrection of Jesus is the forerunner of the resurrection of our bodies and restoration of the earth. There are endless debates and speculations about what type of bodies we will have at the resurrection. Will we all receive the six-packs of our dreams? Will we revert to the bodies we had in our 20s? I do not find these questions that intriguing. What is compelling to me is the clear teaching that our ethnicities are not wiped away at the resurrection. Jesus was raised with his brown, Middle Eastern, Jewish body.

Money Habits You Should Start Using Today

Tanisha A. Sykes is a personal finance expert. Follow her on Twitter @tanishastips.

As a little girl growing up in a West Philly row house with my Grandmom, her five daughters, and their six kids, I marveled at how my Gmom, now 86, kept the home running on all cylinders.

Aside from keeping a tidy abode, she always “handled her business,” especially when it came to money. Was she rich? No. But she was a smart money manager who understood what personal finance experts have been evangelizing for years: Building wealth has more to do with creating good money management habits than it does with pulling down a big paycheck.

For example, my grandmother taught me to:

- Pay with cash.
- Buy only what I need.
- Eat at home.
- Pay all my bills on time.
- Don't spend without a budget.

Simple enough advice to remember, but sticking to it can be a challenge, especially for African Americans, who experience higher unemployment and lower incomes than the general population.

Case in point: The median income of black households in 2014 was $35,398, compared with the national median of $53,657, according to the U.S. Census Bureau's annual report on Income and Poverty in the United States.

Even for those African Americans who are doing well, the truth is that we still experience less intergenerational inheritance, higher rates of caretaking for extended family, and differing patterns of homeownership.

One way to take steps toward closing the wealth gap is to return to the kind of financial lessons my grandmother espoused. Learn five ways you could make her proud, and help yourself in the bargain under the tab Money Matters at the Church website.
