

"Bringing the gifts that my ancestors gave, I am the dream and the hope of the slave. I rise. I rise. I rise."

– Maya Angelou

The Front Cover features South Carolina Gullah artist Leroy Campbell. This work of art depicts a young African American child who is confident in the skin he is in and understands that he is a Prince, a true King in training. He has been empowered by what he is learning in books and through the examples set by his family and mentors. He is ready to achieve and move fearlessly through the highs and lows of life.

WELCOME TO MOUNT MORIAH

Welcome to Sweet Magnolia

AUGUST FOCUS IS ON EDUCATION

Who was your favorite teacher? Most people rarely forget the teachers who had profound impacts on their lives, whether positive or negative. Teachers touch the lives of more children than most professions. The right attitude, teaching style, and determination can encourage a student to strive for excellence or settle for mediocrity. Throughout this month, we will examine Education within our community. Today, let us pray for those who are investing in our children.
